THE PROJECT

The Human Resource Development Foundation (HRDF) has been awarded a $5000 grant by the Institute for Humanist Studies, New York, USA to conduct comprehensive programs in 30 schools and colleges of eastern Uttar Pradesh to demonstrate and explain the scientific basis of miracles, magic and other so-called supernatural feats performed by charlatans.

The Institute for Humanist Studies (IHS) is a think-tank whose mission is to promote greater public awareness, understanding, and support for humanism. The IHS promotes humanism, a non-religious philosophy based on reason and compassion. It promotes humanism as a philosophy of life inspired by humanity and guided by reason. The Institute specializes in pioneering new technology and methods for the advancement of humanism.

The IHS provides accessible and authoritative information about humanism and the non-religious to the media, academia, and the general public. It also performs a distinctive role within the organized humanist community. As a non-membership organization, IHS is able to complement other humanist organizations rather than competing for members and subscribers. It not only cooperates with other humanist groups, but actively supports them by publicizing their activities and providing financial support to their best programs.
